

EXECUTIVE BIOGRAPHY

John Hebert

John Hebert is an executive vice president and president of the Global Capital Markets business of CSC. He's also president and CEO of CSC's wholly owned subsidiary, Delaware Trust Company, and is ultimately responsible for growing and managing CSC's global offering of capital markets solutions. Prior to his current role, John served as president of CSC's Global Financial Markets business and started his career at CSC by co-leading the company's corporate development activities.

Before joining CSC, John served as vice president and portfolio manager at Ashford Capital Management, where he focused on investments in the software and business services sectors. Prior to that, John was a vice president at Trident Capital, a private equity firm providing growth capital to software and tech-enabled services companies. Previous experience also includes management consulting at McKinsey & Company, director of Business Development at Ask Jeeves, and investment banking at Robertson Stephens. He began his career as an accountant at Deloitte & Touche.

John earned his MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Business. He also holds an A.B. in political science and an A.M. in organizational studies from Stanford University.
